INNERMETRIX UK's focus is to help businesses identify, understand and improve the overall health and profitability of their organisation.

Organisations everywhere are looking for better ways to answer the question, and properly discover what really drives performance in a modern business. During these challenging times, being able to understand how to drive effectiveness and performance in the business is critical.

Innermetrix has developed the most comprehensive suite of business diagnostic tools and people development processes on the market today, allowing our Consultants to help businesses more accurately, identify critical issues, measure and isolate the causes, and craft and implement appropriate solutions to resolve them.

Leadership

The IMX approach is a holistic business consulting process that breaks down the complicated structure of any organisation into eleven separate but interdependent core areas of performance.

Communication

This makes it easy to identify which aspects of the business are performing, which are not, and to what extent either situation may be the case.

From this initial diagnostic, it becomes possible to accurately identify and measure where performance is being negatively impacted, isolate that problem and craft a dedicated response to correct it.

Teamwork

The result is a proven, easy-to-follow process that delivers improved overall health and profitability to every dimension of the entire organisation.

We have many business consultative tools at our disposal to accurately tailor the correct solution for your needs. We focus on the people, because it's the people that truly make the business functions happen, and that's why our approach, methodology and implementation model is so effective.

What Can Innermetrix Do For You?

INNERMETRIX likes to talk about being in partnership rather than just a client. We find that by having open discussions with our client's, this invariably leads to a more productive and cost effective starting point which creates real understanding of your business needs.

Clients find the holistic view given by the Organisational Health Check™, gives a platform to see where the critical issues appear most. This is very often the starting point for most organisations.

We pride ourselves in our methodologies and our abilities to then craft solutions that address the needs of the people, team, department, or entire organisation and its here where our approach makes a long term, sustainable difference to our client's performance, service levels and profitability.
